BACKGROUND:

□ Survey of 1,500+ US Consumers balanced to census.

FINDINGS:

- □ Respondents are increasingly likely to say they would prefer to watch movies at home vs. going to the movie theater.
- □ All streaming video services have tested well in our monthly tracker. In recent months, Disney+, HBO Max, and Apple TV have shown growth.
- Notably, the percentage of Disney+ subscribers and HBO Max subscribers who also use Netflix has increased sequentially (ie, usage of competitive platforms has not caused a drop-off in their likelihood of being a Netflix subscriber). This ties out with Netflix subscriber feedback that they see these services more as additive than replacement of Netflix.
- □ HBO Max subscribers have higher incomes, on average, compared to Netflix and Disney+ subs.
- □ The percentage of consumers who feel Disney+ has upcoming content that they need increased in October/November.
- □ The average price point that would move Netflix subscribers to cancel has increased compared to readings in 2019.
- □ Subscriber sentiment to Disney+ is very positive and has improved in the back half of 2020.
